Two-Toe Tom Legend

In the 1920's, deep in the swamps along the border between Alabama and Florida can be heard stories of a water monster of a different sort. Said to be a demon-possessed alligator that some estimate to be more than 20-feet long, Two-Toe Tom is the focus of numerous legends and tall tales. His name originates from the claim that he lost all but two toes on one foot to a bear trap. Tom made himself infamous by devouring scores of cows, mules and, of course, humans. Due to his frequent attacks, many hunts for the living legend were organized over the years, but Two-Toe Tom was never captured. Some believe he lurks in Sand Hammock Lake near Esto still to this day.

Big Jimmy

Big Jimmy is known for his funny redneck voice, comedic song re-makes and his rib-tickling jokes. His performance contains a comedy skit that goes into songs. For example: He would tell jokes about farming and then go into this song after the joke and then tell another joke maybe about him living in a redneck trailer park and then go into this song
